Course description

This course introduces students to the field of international relations—the study of the interactions among the various actors that participate in international politics, including almost 7.1 billion people, 195 countries (according to the U.S. Department of State, which doesn't include Taiwan or territories like Bermuda, Greenland, Palestine and Puerto Rico, which are governed by other countries) and thousands of non-state actors, from transnational advocacy groups like the Red Cross to international organizations like the United Nations to terrorist groups like al Qaeda.

By completing the requirements for this course, you should broaden your understanding of the world and appreciate different perspectives on global issues and debates. You will be expected to think critically about the arguments and opinions you read and hear. Some of these will challenge assumptions and viewpoints that you have. The goal is not to convert you to a particular political perspective but rather to stimulate you to clarify and understand your own values. In doing so, you should also be better able to make intelligent judgments about international affairs.

Specific learning outcomes

As a Social Science class, this course focuses on the complex relationship between the individual and society and more particularly on the interdependent relationship between individuals, states and the international system. Upon completion of the course, students should be able to:

- Demonstrate an understanding of the defining concepts, theories and methods used in the study of international relations;
- Demonstrate critical familiarity with key concepts in the different areas of international relations (conflict & security, international organizations, international political economy, international law, human rights, and environmental politics);
- understand the strategic and interactive nature of international relations;

- develop a method for efficiently keeping track of international events;
- identify and present empirical data on key developments in international relations.
- evaluate the material trade-offs and ethical dimensions associated with different international policy choices; and
- present a cogent and effective oral and written argument in favor of a particular policy choice or point of view.

As a Global Diversity class, this course also covers issues that deal in a comparative way with cultures originating outside the United States or Western Europe. As such, upon completion of this class, students should be able to:

- consider multiple perspectives on international relations, including the views of non-western countries and groups;
- understand the role of non-western countries and peoples in global politics; and
- discuss how the history, culture, politics, and economy of non-western countries and peoples affect their views on global politics.

Course materials

One full book is required for this seminar and available at the Ursinus bookstore and other sources:

- Frieden, Jeffrey A., David A. Lake, and Kenneth A. Schultz. 2016. World Politics: Interests, Interactions, Institutions. Third edition. New York: W.W. Norton.

You may also purchase the e-book version. The syllabus refers to page numbers from the third edition of this book using the acronym WP.

All other relevant readings (articles and book chapters/excerpts) are provided in a course reader.

Requirements and assignments

Although an introductory course, POL 252 is reading and labor intensive. Most of your time outside the classroom will be spent reading, thinking about the class material, and preparing coursework. It is imperative that you plan your schedule to allow yourself adequate time to complete the readings ahead of class time. At the same time, however, you should not necessarily try to read every word and you may need to skim longer readings. Skimming is an important skill to learn (if you haven't already) that will allow you to identify the main points in the texts efficiently. I provide tips on how to skim and how to take notes on Canvas.

POL 252 is also a discussion-based course that demands your regular attendance and full participation. You need to come to class ready and willing to discuss the readings and the issues that they raise. You will be expected not only to share your opinions with others but also to demonstrate that you have read and thought about the assigned texts. Quality participation also involves engaging with your classmates, listening carefully and critically to the views that they express. It can be especially challenging for some people to participate in large class discussions; if this applies to you, please come talk to me about strategies for becoming more comfortable speaking in class.

Attendance & preparation (required to pass this course)

In keeping with a strong liberal arts tradition that encourages active learning and complete participation in the education process, Ursinus College expects students to attend class. Not attending class will result in a failing grade.

What you should know about this class

This is a highly interactive and fast-paced course. You need to schedule at least 8 hours per week outside the classroom on this class for readings, assignments, and class preparation. This course also requires you to complete varying tasks each week. You will need to plan ahead and make time for your classwork in your regular schedule. Check Canvas every weekday for deadlines and assignments.

Safety valve: you can miss two class meetings for any reason (no questions asked) without an explanation, and it will not affect your grade. Save these for illness, emergencies, and planned absences. 3–4 absences reduce your overall course grade by up to a letter grade. Five absences result in a failing grade for the course. For the purpose of your grade, there is no difference between “excused” and “unexcused” absences. In the event that you experience a significant health problem or other issue that may prevent you from performing adequately in your academic work and/or attending class for a number of days, you must notify the Ursinus Institute for Student Success. The Ursinus Institute can be reached at ursinusinstitute@ursinus.edu or 610-409-3400.

1. In-class participation (10% of your course grade)

You as a student are the most important part of this seminar; your active participation in a civil manner is necessary to succeed in this course. Participation (out of 100 points) is graded based on (1) your contributions in class, (2) short informal writing assignments in class, and (3) your reading notes. A rubric is posted on Canvas. I will post a preliminary participation grade in late February and update it again in late March. You may also inquire about your participation grade at any time.

Safety valve: You may choose to not participate on a day (or be absent that day) without penalty for two days without losing any points.

2. Pre-class quizzes (5% of your course grade)

Twice every week, short pre-class quizzes on Canvas test your comprehension of the material you had to prepare for class on that day. These quizzes are usually administered online on Canvas before class and consist of multiple choice and short answer questions on the assigned required reading and on current events. Details and quiz dates can be found on Canvas. Quizzes not taken by the deadline (usually 8am before class) will earn 0 points.

Safety valve: Your lowest four quiz grades are dropped. Your overall quiz grade is the average of all remaining quizzes.

3. Policy Advocacy (10% of your course grade)

Throughout the semester, we hold 5–6 debates to investigate in more depth some key issues in international politics from a global perspective. Your task is to advocate for a particular policy from the point of view of a given country's government, citizens, or another group of interest. You will sign up for a topic by January 31 and submit a pre-debate memo in advance of the debate. Your assignment grade is based on the quality of your memo, your arguments and your performance during the debate. More information about the format of this assignment can be found on Canvas. You must meet with me in person at least two weeks before your debate date.

4. Short assignments (20% of your course grade)

During the semester, you will complete 3 out of 5 short assignments that help you practice different skills. Due dates for the assignments are noted in the syllabus. Instructions for each assignment are posted on Canvas. Plan 3-5 hours of time to complete each short assignment.

5. Data analysis (10% of your course grade)

In Week 11, after working through a tutorial in class, you will complete a data analysis assignment to explore a key question in international politics. Topics and instructions are posted on Canvas. Plan up to 10 hours to complete this assignment.

6. Essays (20% of your course grade)

You will write two short analytical essays on two specific questions in international relations. Each essay has the function of establishing a clear argument and backing it up with evidence. The essays must be 3 single-spaced pages long and cite references. I will provide prompts for each essay; further guidelines can be found on Canvas.

Safety valves: Your essay with the highest score will automatically count 15% of your overall course grade, with the remaining essay counting 5%.

7. Exams (25% of your course grade)

The midterm exam (10% of your course grade) will test your knowledge of the course material and on current events up to that point. This exam will use mostly multiple choice and short answer questions; no outside resources are allowed. The final exam (15% of your course grade) will test your knowledge of the content we explored throughout the semester. This exam is cumulative, but it is an open-note exam: you are encouraged to bring your notes (but not books, articles, or other materials). You cannot take this exam early. If you know you cannot be here for the exam on this date, do not take this class.

How to excel in writing assignments

Whenever you want some extra support with a writing (or speaking) assignment, for this class or any other, consider visiting the Center for Writing and Speaking, www.ursinus.edu/offices/center-for-writing-and-speaking/. The Center is staffed by trained peer tutors who can help you at any stage of the writing process. You can go to them to ask about your ideas early in the process, while you are still brainstorming; you can go when you have a rough draft; or you can go when you are almost finished revising. It is a very good idea to have a smart and sympathetic reader look over your work before handing it in! Make an appointment at <https://ursinus.mywconline.net>. You can also email them with any questions at cws@ursinus.edu.

Grading

Rubrics for all assignments are posted on Canvas. The course grade consists of the components below, sums to 100, and converts into letter grades as stated below.

In-class participation	10%	A	100 - 93.0	C+	79.999 - 77.0
Quizzes	5%	A-	92.999 - 90.0	C	76.999 - 73.0
Policy advocacy	10%	B+	89.999 - 87.0	C-	72.999 - 70.0
Short assignments	20%	B	86.999 - 83.0	D+	69.999 - 67.0
Data analysis	10%	B-	82.999 - 80.0	D	66.999 - 63.0
Essays	20%			D-	62.999 - 60.0
Midterm exam	10%			F	59.999 - 0
Final exam	15%
Total	100%

Late assignments. All written assignments (short assignments, data analysis assignment, essays) are due at 11:59pm on their due date unless otherwise noted. The individual assignment grade (out of 100) will drop by 5 points for every calendar day the assignment is submitted after the due date.

Course policies

Disability accommodations. I am committed to a fair and equitable learning environment. This includes ensuring equal access and providing reasonable accommodations for students with disabilities. Students requesting academic accommodations must meet with the Director of Disability Services at the Center for Academic Support in the lower level of Myrin Library. At the beginning of each semester, qualifying students must meet with the Director of Disability Services to reinstate accommodations and pick up their accommodations letters. Students are also responsible for presenting their letters to the course faculty member. If you have any questions, contact Shammah Bermudez, Director of Disability Services, at 484-762-4329 or by email at sbermudez@ursinus.edu.

Religious observance. I will also make every effort to accommodate religious observances and obligations. You are asked to bring any possible conflicts to my attention as soon as possible. Students should not expect that, if they do poorly on an assignment, to claim, at that time, the need of an accommodation. This statement is to preclude that problem, and allow people with a need for accommodations to be treated fairly and appropriately.

Classroom interactions. Students and faculty each have responsibility for maintaining an appropriate learning environment. Those who fail to adhere to this standard may be subject to disciplinary procedures. Professional courtesy and sensitivity are especially important with respect to topics dealing with differences of race, color, culture, religion, creed, politics, veteran's status, sexual orientation, gender, gender identity, gender expression, age, disability, class, and nationality. Course rosters are provided to the instructor with the student's legal name, but I will gladly honor your request to address you by an alternate name or gender pronoun. Please be patient with me as I learn your names and pronouns and I encourage you to correct me when/if I make a mistake (i.e., call you by the wrong name/pronoun or mispronounce your name).

Academic honesty. All students at Ursinus College are responsible for knowing and adhering to the academic integrity policy of our institution. Please familiarize yourself with this policy at (<https://www.ursinus.edu/student-life/handbook/academic-policies/academic-honesty/>). Violations of this policy may include: cheating, plagiarism, aid of academic dishonesty, fabrication, lying, bribery, and threatening behavior. The policy also prohibits submitting material that you previously submitted in another course. If you are involved in plagiarism, the penalty will be failure in the course and you will be reported to the College. In this one regard there are no second chances. If you are not sure if something violates standards—ask. If you are not sure whether to cite or not to cite—cite. Every student must complete the following tutorial in the first week of class: (<https://www.indiana.edu/~academy/firstPrinciples/index.html>).

Emergencies and absences. Missing a deadline results in penalties as specified above, regardless of the reason for absence or late submission. However,

1. you may choose to not participate on a day (or be absent that day) without penalty for two days without losing any points.
2. you can miss two class meetings for any reason (no questions asked) without an effect on your grade.
3. your four lowest quizzes are automatically dropped from your grade.

No electronic devices in the classroom. Laptops and tablets cannot be used during class meetings. Studies have shown that "laptop use is negatively associated with student learning and it poses a distraction to fellow students."<sup>1,2,3</sup> Please bring reading notes and books to class. Cell phones must be stored away and silenced during class.
